

INTERNATIONALS

rounded the leeward mark the Daileys were close behind and choose to drive off to leeward for clear air. They turned on their sped machine and from then on we only saw their transom. The following two legs were reaches and we comfortably held our own, that is to say, second, for our bright spot in the series.

THE FOURTH RACE

by Mark Kastel

The Fourth Race was similar to the First Race in its degree of top competition with the exception of fellow Skokie Lagoons sailors Pat and Katy FitzGerald out pacing most of the top boats before finally dropping back to a respectable fifth place.

Let me tell you that win or lose, thanks to my fellow Penguin sailors and the volunteers at the Cambridge Yacht Club I have never had a better time at a regatta. The sailors we lost to, Bud and Sue Dailey, Daniel Pontes and Felipe Manderbal, demonstrated an exceptional level of small boat sailing skills. But more importantly they demonstrated the highest level of sportsmanship (sports-personship?) and were a joy to sail against and to see on shore. On behalf of both Audrey and myself, a tip of the hat to these four fine Corinthians.

Race Five – Modified Olympic Course to Port

The wind continued to blow from the southwest at about 7 knots. First around the weather mark were Gabriel (Tavares), Daniel (Pontes), Dick (Tennerstedt), Bud (Dailey) and Mark (Kastel).

Bud sailed to an inside overlap with Tenner at the jibe mark while Daniel ground down Gabriel on the second reach. Sailing a low rhumbline course on the second reach (factoring in the outgoing current) we were able to chop some distance off the leaders.

A stack of boats behind sailing higher finally cut off our clear air. A major pile up occurred as the stack converged on the leeward mark. We jumped into phase by tacking to starboard on the long weather leg, moving up to second place by the first crossing. Bud was being heavily covered by Daniel. We covered Daniel on the run keeping him from breaking out, while Bud stayed ahead of Gabriel. After a spirited tacking duel on the final beat, Daniel finished ahead of us by two lengths with Bud carefully protecting third.
